GARBAGE COLLECTOR PROMISES TO RETURN VALUABLES FOUND

E. Paul Patton, Eddington, Receives Contract For $1200 A Year

FIVE SUBMIT BIDS

Burgess Clifford L. Anderson Submits His Annual Message

Bristol housewives will no longer have to worry if they accidentally leave a piece of silverware in the garbage; or if the wedding ring should slip off and fall in with the potatoes, or should baby just naturally throw Dad's watch into the spinach left over from the evening meal. All the valuables will be returned.

At least that is what is promised by the man to whom was awarded the contract for collecting the dry garbage for the next year. The contractor receiving the award was E. Paul Patton, Cranlea Farm, Eddington. The compensation will be $1200 for the year.

Richard T. Myers, chairman of health and sanitation committee, advised Council, last night, that there were five bidders for the garbage contract. One failed to enclose a certified check or cash in the amount of ten percent of the bid and therefore his bid was not considered. The bidders were: Louis Coski, $1500; John Blasch, $1200; John Lesnec, $360; John Secoda, $1200; E. Paul Patton, $816. Secoda failed to forward either check or cash with his bid.

The committee, according to Mr. Myers, investigated the bidders and their equipment and recommended Patton. The recommendation was approved.

Annual Message of Chief Burgess

To the President and Members
Bristol Borough Council,
Bristol, Pa.

Gentlemen:

My twenty-third consecutive message will be a greeting to the officers and members of borough council. Through illness, I was unable to be with you at the January meeting, but my thoughts were with you, and I knew that all was properly and carefully planned by the Officers and Members of our various Committees.

We again closed our year with all bills paid, as well as all matured bonds and the interest thereon.

The reports of your committees bespeak of careful thought and attention that they require and deserve, and I am proud that we have men who unselfishly devote their time and energy to the welfare and safe-keeping of our citizens.

I shall not dwell on the reports of your committees, as they have already been submitted and present a record worthy of the approval of our citizens and taxpayers and I again ask and feel that the appreciation of our citizens and taxpayers is due to these men who, without recompense, serve our interest so loyally and competently.

I have only one criticism to make and that is the reduction in our tax rate. My personal opinion is that, inasmuch as we had it reduced twice before, that we should have let the old rate remain; instead of reducing the rate, we should have increased the appropriations of the police and fire committees, so that the number of police and paid firemen could be increased.

However, I still stand with the various committees which I am sure acted in the best of faith, and for the good of our community.

I still pledge myself ready at all times to work with your officers and committees on any and all problems that tend to the welfare, happiness and progress of our community and its citizens.

May I also wish for the Officers and Members of your honorable body, and for our friends and citizens, health, happiness and prosperity throughout the year.

Respectfully submitted,

(signed) CLIFFORD L. ANDERSON,
Burgess.

Soldiers Blamed For Nearly Causing Wreck

MORRISVILLE, Apr. 15.—A Pennsylvania Railroad express train was nearly wrecked twice last night at Morrisville. Once on either side of this borough at about 7.30 o'clock.

Two soldiers on their way back to Fort Bragg after an Easter lurching twice pulled an emergency cord that brought the flyer to two sudden stops. Brakes were clamped so tightly on the second stop that all the wheels of the eighth car, a Pullman, were ground flat by the rails, necessitating the removal of the car before the train could proceed. Altogether the train in question, a New York-Washington express, was held up 65 minutes, while four others on the division were delayed shorter periods.

The two soldiers are reported as being John F. McQuade, 34, and George Morgan, 28. Railroad police arrested them for damaging railroad property and took them off at North Philadelphia Station. At the 22nd st. and Hunting Park ave. station, where they were slated, they said they stopped the train because they wanted to get into the dining car.

An Easter Stroll

(By "The Stroller")

He took his lady fair for an Easter promenade on Pond street, but didn't bargain for the public aid he would have to give.

Proudly they strolled the sidewalk, in Easter finery, until her hat-veil became entangled at the nape of the neck.

The struggle began, a small one at first, to disentangle the fine mesh, but to no avail. Finally, she handed the nattily-attired escort her hand-bag, so she could give full attention to the difficulty.

With no results forthcoming, in desperation she enlisted the gentleman's services, and after a few minutes' "time out," they continued happily on their way.

CLAIMS HE CAN TELL SEX OF FIRST CHILD

Bucks County Prison Inmate Reaches Conclusion By Reading Parent's Name

IS MYSTIFYING MANY

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 15.—Claiming that he is able to determine the sex of the first child by reading the complete name of the mother or father, Richard Pillivant, of San Francisco, a Bucks County prison inmate, has a pretty fair record in this field.

With a two-year prison stretch before him, Pillivant is mystifying prison inmates and guards.

"Talk to Laymen" Delivered By Rev. W. E. Preston Haas

A "Talk to Laymen" was delivered by the Rev. W. E. Preston Haas, pastor of Bristol Methodist Church, last evening, when members of the Men's Christian Fellowship League of Lower Bucks County met in Bristol Methodist Church.

Introduced to the gathering by Howard Smoyer, Fellowship president, the Rev. Haas stressed the point that laymen should conduct the affairs of the church, and should be a great aid to the pastor. "Jesus was a layman, as were also the Apostles," he stated. "The early apostles placed the church machinery in the hands of the laymen. . . . Nothing helps a preacher so much as having a group of men to back him up. There are always many women to help, but few men. So it was at the cross—there was but one man, and the rest were women."

The three great "peaks" in Christianity were listed by the Rev. Haas as the periods marking the start of great works by "the martyrs, the monks, and the Methodists," all of which were started by laymen.

"We should 'talk' our church to other people," said the speaker, who also added that "Saints are men the light of Christ shines through." The gathering was likewise told that "The Christian Church loses not by defeat but by default."

A quiz contest followed. The May meeting, on the 12th, is scheduled for Morrisville Presbyterian Church.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

The Problem of Prices

Washington, April 14. THE new price-fixing agency set up by the President, with Mr. Leon Henderson at its head, is a step in the right direction, but it isn't as long a step as had been hoped for. It shows an appreciation of the problem of prices rather than a comprehension of it.

MR. HENDERSON, who from the beginning of the defense effort has been supposedly in charge of price control, now has his field enlarged and his power enhanced. He is an exceedingly energetic, valuable person, with quite radical views, but is far more opinionated than most of his New Deal colleagues. Action may be expected from him. The question is

Must Train To Fight Outside Western Hemisphere

By Griffing Bancroft

Washington, Apr. 15.—Secretary of War Stimson today told Congress that the U. S. Army must be trained to fight outside the Western Hemisphere, and assured the nation that progress of the huge rearmament drive is running eight to 12 months ahead of the World War period.

Directly referring to the possibility of another American expeditionary force in discussing the "complicated technique" of modern warfare, Stimson said—

"Furthermore our forces must be prepared for the possibilities of war in many and varied terrains, it being quite uncertain in what part of North or South or Central America, or even possibly other regions it ultimately may be necessary to use them in the defense of this country and its possessions."

Stimson testified before a special Senate committee investigating all phases of the defense program, headed by Sen. Truman, D. Mo., as Secretary of Navy Knox and Donald M. Nelson, defense director of purchasing, were called before other committees probing preparedness work.

Stimson was highly optimistic regarding the final outcome of the defense program, but he warned private industry that from this point on it has great responsibility, and that the training of "many successive instalments of men" may last as long as five years.

RAF Bombers Rain Bombs On Cruisers

London, Apr. 15.—RAF planes rained bombs of heaviest calibre on the German battle cruisers Gneisenau and Scharnhorst in a slashing four-hour attack on the German naval base at Brest on the French coast, the air ministry said today.

Bombs were seen bursting either on or near the 26,000 ton German warships, the communiqué said, adding that other RAF bombers carried out daylight raids off the Dutch coast prior to the night attack on Brest.

Double significance attached to the slam-bang attack on Brest. First there was the sustained intensity of the attack itself, second, the fact that the Gneisenau and Scharnhorst still lay at anchor in the often-raided port.

British Reported Routed Near Salonika

Berlin, Apr. 15.—The German High Command today announced that British forces have been routed southeast of Salonika, German-occupied Greek port, and that German mechanized forces are now in pursuit of the British.

SPRING AND BASEBALL

Yep! Spring must be here: the baseball season has opened.

From now until October, the fans will be privileged to throw pop bottles at the umpire and to relieve their feelings by urging that the "big bum" be taken out. Just what sensations the season will produce is still to be demonstrated.

They are looking for a boom year in baseball. The boxoffice has been enlarged to meet all demands. Crowds which have been counted in hundreds in late years are expected to run into thousands. The baseball appetite is still keen and there is money to satisfy it.

There are eighteen players, not counting replacements, in every game. No one man, however magnificent his performance, can bring victory. It is the precision with which a whole team operates that counts in the long run—precision and instantaneous thinking. The two, of course, are closely related.

Fans who sit on bleachers and yell their heads off at homers and snappy infield work during the 1941 season ought to realize what a privilege they are enjoying. It is a privilege that is possible only on this side of the Atlantic. In many countries baseball is unknown—in many others they wouldn't have time just now to watch a baseball game.

RAILROAD CASE

A ghost of the great railroad cases of the 70's and 80's appeared in the Supreme Court of the United States in Washington and laid a bitter dispute in the laps of the Justices in the case of Union Pacific Railroad and City of Kansas City, Kansas, versus United States; Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway; Missouri Pacific Railroad; Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway, and Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad.

The controversy is: Did the Union Pacific conspire with the City of Kansas City, Kansas, by selecting the site, planning the construction, and furnishing the money for a new $5,000,000 food terminal on its lines at Kansas City, Kansas?

If there was such a conspiracy, was it for the purpose of attracting $700,000 yearly freight revenues on produce from the other railroads to its own through offering rebates and concessions in violation of the Interstate Commerce and Elkins Acts to dealers in fruits and vegetables at the Kansas City, Missouri, market to induce them to move across the river to the new terminal reached only by the Union Pacific lines?

Missouri-born and able Special Assistant Attorney General James C. Wilson told the Justices that the Union Pacific officials went so far as to choose the "color of the bricks" for the new terminal, while counsel for the Union Pacific denied all allegations.

these four devices without the others will fall short of results. The voice of experience insists that all four must operate together, and even to a layman it is obvious that no ceiling can be put on wages until the ceiling has been put on prices. It also is obvious that no makeshift, piecemeal scheme of price control will last long under the terrific pressure of deficit spending, sure to come when the defense effort reaches its peak.

IT is obviously time to stop dilly-dallying with this serious problem and to deal with it in a comprehensive way. While the average price level has not risen more than five per cent in a year, half of that rise has taken place in the last month. Some prices have risen; some have fallen; some have hardly moved at all. In other words, there exists a definite imbalance in the price structure, with the rise exceeding the fall. According to the most experienced experts, this is the invariable prelude to a general upward movement. The essential thing is to check this movement before it gets really under way, with the higher wages forcing higher prices and the higher prices forcing higher wages, and so on, up, up, up.

EVERY thoughtful man in the Government—and out of it—wants to avoid that endless upward spiral. The President has been pressed to act, and the Henderson commission might profitably have been named weeks ago. Mr. Henderson is likely to do a good job as far as he can go. But without priorities, tax control and borrowing limitation, neither he nor anyone else can be really effective. Perhaps these supplemental devices will be supplied later. Apparently, not more than one thing of this kind at a time can be obtained from the President, who is curiously reluctant to mold any part of his defense organization on the lines of the former War Industries Board.

HOWEVER, there has been no Administration hesitation in contradicting itself by setting up maxi-forward it through channels to the Secretary of the Navy. Now—he refilled his glass—"let's drink to that report . . . and to him."

The two men stood and, facing west, silently drained their glasses.

Close-hauled on the long-running awells, the Glory of the West slipped along in the moonlight, a lazy chuckle of water under her forefoot. Yesterday's half-gale had fallen to a gentle breeze. The laughing mermaid under the jib-boom pointed the way toward home.

In the master's cabin, Captain O'Moore and Miss Jacqueline, each armed with a pair of dividers, were bending over a map spread out on the table.

The Captain's eyes were lively and very bright, and his brogue richer by several thicknesses. Miss Jacqueline's face, singularly gentle under the white braids wound about her proud head, had never looked so handsome. Names, like music, rippled off their tongues—Tanarivo, Nuka Hiva, Manga Riva, Singapore.

In the big maroon leather chair, just beyond the circle of light, Sondra in one of Miss Jacqueline's gowns sat watching the packing of unseeing eyes. She was thinking of Kemp, who had given his life that night, sitting here, unharmed. Thinking of his last, swift words to her, as he swung her toward the Dragon's stern for her dive into the sea: "Good-by—dearest in all the world."

And she was remembering her last glimpse of him, that afternoon, as the Pelley steamed slowly past the Glory's rail. Kemp—stretched so still on the after hatch of the destroyer, a bright new U. S. ensign covering him, a guard of honor standing at attention on either side.

Suddenly her throat and eyes filled with hot, aching tears. She rose hastily, and went out on the main deck.

The sheer beauty and splendor of a deepwater ship under sail in the moonlight, lifted her out of her sorrow.

As she stood there, Jean Reynall suddenly appeared before her, his tall figure and blowing hair outlined against the light of the moon at his back. With an old-fashioned courtesy, he pretended to lift a hat from his bare head.

"Miss O'Moore—" His voice had taken on her grandfather's rich brogue. "On nights like this, when the sailin' man makes inspection of his decks, 'tis the custom for him to invite the fairest of his young women passengers to join him, and be instructed about the moon and stars—as aids to navigation."

He bowed low, from the waist. "Miss O'Moore, will you honor me with your company this night on my tour of astronomical observation?"

Sondra, holding her skirt out on either side, bobbed a curtsy. "I thank you, Captain Reynall," she came back primly. "I have always been deeply interested in the celestial spheres. I shall do my utmost to profit from your kind instruction, sir."

"Excellent, Miss O'Moore. First, then we shall take up the matter of position." He stepped very close, his eyes in the dark smiling down at her. "Now,"—his arm slipped gently about her,—"having fixed my position with relation to a—er—heavenly body, I—"

She laughed, and tried to say "Idiot"; but somehow the word was cut off in the middle. And then, in the moonlight, the two laid but a single, still shadow on the Glory's deck.

From the master's cabin came the happily argumentative voices of Captain Dynamite Danny O'Moore and Miss Jacqueline Reynall, with, presently, a peal of feminine laughter. "Oh, Danny, you mule-headed, flannel-mouthed Mick! Never in all my wanderings over the big wide world have I found anyone who was such darned fun to fight with, as you!"

The ship's bell struck, and the youthful voice of the forward lookout came through the night the ancient formula of the sea:—"F-o-u-r bells—of a clear, calm night, with all lights burning bright, and a-I-I's w-e-d-I-I!"

there discuss the Bristol situation as regards the necessity for additional houses here for defense workers.

Mr. Bennett reached Philadelphia yesterday and it is expected that he will come to Bristol sometime this week to survey the area and to decide whether or not Bristol can be considered a defense area.

The Great Game of Politics

these four devices without the others will fall short of results. The voice of experience insists that all four must operate together, and even to a layman it is obvious that no ceiling can be put on wages until the ceiling has been put on prices. It also is obvious that no makeshift, piecemeal scheme of price control will last long under the terrific pressure of deficit spending, sure to come when the defense effort reaches its peak.

IT is obviously time to stop dilly-dallying with this serious problem and to deal with it in a comprehensive way. While the average price level has not risen more than five per cent in a year, half of that rise has taken place in the last month. Some prices have risen; some have fallen; some have hardly moved at all. In other words, there exists a definite imbalance in the price structure, with the rise exceeding the fall. According to the most experienced experts, this is the invariable prelude to a general upward movement. The essential thing is to check this movement before it gets really under way, with the higher wages forcing higher prices and the higher prices forcing higher wages, and so on, up, up, up.

EVERY thoughtful man in the Government—and out of it—wants to avoid that endless upward spiral. The President has been pressed to act, and the Henderson commission might profitably have been named weeks ago. Mr. Henderson is likely to do a good job as far as he can go. But without priorities, tax control and borrowing limitation, neither he nor anyone else can be really effective. Perhaps these supplemental devices will be supplied later. Apparently, not more than one thing of this kind at a time can be obtained from the President, who is curiously reluctant to mold any part of his defense organization on the lines of the former War Industries Board.

HOWEVER, there has been no Administration hesitation in contradicting itself by setting up maxi-

forward it through channels to the Secretary of the Navy. Now—he refilled his glass—"let's drink to that report . . . and to him."

Pilgrimage to Studios of Artists Eagerly Anticipated

Violet Oakley, Edith Emerson, and Mary Townsend Mason are names high on the roster of artistic achievement. Many fondle a desire to become acquainted with the personalities who wear these names. The Old York Road Art Guild is presenting this privilege on April 25th when it will hold its second pilgrimage of the current season.

The studio shared by the Misses Oakley and Emerson at St. George's Road above Allen Road, Chestnut Hill; and Mrs. Mason's studio on West Hartwell Lane, Chestnut Hill, will be open from two to five on the appointed afternoon. After visiting the Chestnut Hill studios, the pilgrimage participants are invited to be guests for tea of Mrs. Lawrence B. Myers, Elkins Park, where her hand-painted landscape dining-room walls will be on exhibit. Orchids grown by Mrs. Myers will be exhibited also.

Tickets for the pilgrimage will be on sale the day of the pilgrimage at the entrance of each studio.

King All Glorious, help us ever to be Thy loyal servants. Our eyes cannot see Thee, yet we believe in Thy rule. Put an end to tyranny and slavery, selfishness and cruelty, by the establishment of Thy rule. Save us from self-will; save us from vain ambition. Order Thou our lives. As we make our way in the world, let not the glitter of its charms deceive our judgment, or the threat of its evils disturb our faith. VITAMIN NEEDS OF CHICKS ARE HIGH, RESEARCH SHOWS

Ingredients Discovered for Adding Vitamins.

"Because of the rapidity with which the size of a baby chick's body increases, chick rations must have a high vitamin content," reports Dr. H. J. Smith, director of research for Purina Mills.

Dr. H. J. Smith

Dr. Smith states that research at the Purina Laboratories has shown that the vitamins most apt to be lacking in baby chick rations are A, D, and G. Proven ingredients have been discovered for adding these vitamins to a ration to meet the needs of baby chicks.

"Pur-a-tene," Dr. Smith explains, "is a concentrated source of pro-vitamin A. Fish oils supply vitamin D. Puriflavin supplies not only vitamin G, the filtrate factor (pantothenic acid), but also Vitamin B, which is necessary for the normal development of chicks, and B, which has a great deal to do with metabolism."

"At the Purina Research Laboratories we're constantly studying the vitamin requirements of baby chicks and searching out new methods for meeting these requirements," Dr. Smith reports. "Last year more than 40,000 chicks were used to carry out these tests. After our Laboratories have discovered something that produces better chicks, we take it out to our Experimental Farm for extensive trials to see if it is practical. Then it's not hard for us to decide if this new discovery should be included in our chick starting ration."

In commenting on chick starting rations, Dr. Smith emphasized strongly the importance of giving baby chicks a ration into which the vitamin carriers are so carefully mixed that every thimble-full carries its full share, as that is the amount a baby chick eats daily the first few days of its life.

Folino, Tacony, was christened on Easter in Our Lady of Consolation Church, Tacony, and named Dominick Luigi. The sponsors were Miss Angelina Farruggio, Bristol; and Frank Aiello, Tacony. A family dinner followed at the home of Mrs. Folino's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Luigi Galzerano, Jefferson avenue, Bristol.

James Helling, Fort Madison, N. Y., spent the Easter season with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Helling, Market street.

Week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Joyce, Fillmore street, were Mrs. Sarah Pedrick and Mrs. Alfred Atkinson, Rahway, N. J.

Mrs. L. V. Rue and son William Rue, Bath street, were guests over the Easter holidays of friends at Burtonville, Md.; and Washington, D. C.

BRISTOL THEATRE
Sparkling with new songs, fast comedy, and an array of colorful dances, the Universal musical, "Argentine Nights," opens today at the Bristol Theatre with the Ritz Brothers and the Andrews Sisters as its co-stars.

Never have the three comedians favored to more hilarious effect. Their antics brought more spontaneous laughter from the audience than anything they have offered since their earliest film successes.

GRAND THEATRE
Marking a return on the part of two screen favorites to the gay, sparkling style of mirth-making they helped to make so popular, the new Carole Lombard-Robert Montgomery social comedy, "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" opened yesterday at the Grand Theatre to delighted audiences.

The picture deals with the hectic married life of a successful young Park Avenue lawyer and his spirited young wife, David and Ann Smith.

Both are independent and inclined to have their own way. To avoid serious quarrels that might break up their home they have a house rule that in the event of an argument both must stay in their bedroom until the affair is settled, no matter how long it takes. This scheme interferes with David's business, but his partner carries on during such spells, and it keeps the couple happy until, one day, David learns that their marriage is null and void because of a legal technicality.

Building Associations

Their plan of systematic monthly payments to repay the debt has been tried and proven in the United States by 110 years of home financing.

Building Associations represent the only group of lenders which do not have to experiment.

It is estimated that for every man, woman and child in urban America in the year 1940, there were $76.14 of Saving & Loan Association assets.

In 1831 a group of people pooled their dollars and the first Savings and Loan Association was born. And folks still want to save and live in a debt-free home. The Building Association is about the only way they can do this.

FLEETWINGS PUTS NINE IN SUBURBAN BASEBALL LEAGUE

Airplane Workers Accepted
When Emilie Fails To Appear

RULES ARE CHANGED

Season Will Get Under Way
On Thursday Evening,
May 8th

The Fleetwings, Inc., entered a team in the Bristol Suburban Baseball League last night. The team was accepted by the directors of the circuit, making it a nine-club circuit. Emilie, which was to have also entered last night did not put in an appearance.

A meeting of the circuit was held in the St. Ann's club house with President Paul Voltz presiding. Several changes were made in the rules and regulations of the league.

It was decided to open the season on May 8, and play every Tuesday and Thursday evening until the middle of August. The teams will play three rounds which will be divided into two halves of 12 games each. The winner of each half will play off for the title in a series of three games.

Postponed games must be played with a week, if not the president will set a playoff date and the team failing to appear on that date will forfeit the game.

HIGHLY RATED - By Jack Sords

Carl Schmieg, Harry Renner, Walter Corson, Ross Naylor, Harry Seifert and others.

Given the name of Chief of Police Felix R. Gowan which was written on a card, Mr. Pillivant hesitated because the middle name was not written out in full. After doing some mental juggling, he reached a correct verdict. The first child of Chief and Mrs. Gowan is a girl.

Pillivant, who serves as the cook in the prison kitchen, says his deductions are all based on the number of letters and a mathematical formula. It took him three years to figure out his science and it takes him only a minute to perform the reading while the individual is waiting.

Unfortunately he flunked on the reading of Guard Harry Seifert's name when he said his first born was a girl; it happens to be a boy.

"Well, your name has been changed in the spelling somewhere along the line," said Pillivant.

At the present stage the formula is applicable only to determining the sex of the first child. The formula won't apply to the second, third or fourth born.

In the field of predictions, Mr. Pillivant averaged one hundred per cent correct for several fathers-to-be. "I keep the formula in my head and no one knows it but me," he explained, although he showed the back of an envelope which resembled a sheet of jumbled figures and letters sort of like income tax deduction scraps.

"Before I leave here I will have time to figure it out for more than the first child," said Pillivant.
